Brian serves as counsel in acquisitions, refinancings, and investments, covering contract mail carriers, poultry companies, energy and manufacturing, grain handling and processing, and in railroad negotiations.

He continues to be involved in defending, negotiating, and preserving property and permit rights and interests before multiple municipal, state, and federal agencies and regions, including involving the environmental media of air, solid waste, water, and hazardous waste; brownfield properties; negotiated, elective site compliance and review; and penalty and operational requirement review and negotiation.

Brian is frequently consulted on unusual contractual or litigation situations involving creative resolutions to disputes.

Amy Stewart

<http://www.roselawfirm.com/attorneys/amy-lee-stewart/>

Amy has been engaged in active trial and appellate practice since 1988, following her clerkship with the Honorable G. Thomas Eisele, Chief Judge, U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas. Her focus is on complex contract and business competition, antitrust, trade secrets, employee mobility, privacy and class action litigation and counseling clients in structuring business transactions and practices to avoid future conflicts. She regularly practices in state and federal courts in Arkansas and around the country. She takes pride in learning the needs and idiosyncrasies of her clients and their businesses, and with those interests in mind, developing cost-effective strategies that result in positive outcomes.
